

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON

College of Education

Do you teach justice-involved youth in a correctional facility? Are you interested in earning $50 by evaluating an online training program?

WHAT: A research team in the College of Education at the University of Oregon is pilot testing a training website for a social skills curriculum that targets justice-involved youth. We need teachers and VR providers to test our training platform and provide us with feedback. If you participate, you'll review our training website asynchronously and share your thoughts and feedback in a survey.

WHEN: Evaluations will need to be completed by 8/15/23.

HOW MUCH?: Participants will be compensated with a $50 Amazon gift card for approximately one hour of their time.

INTERESTED?: Contact Kyle Reardon at kreardon@uoregon.edu to share your interest and to get more information.

OUR PROJECT: READY for WAGES is a research project focused on developing and testing a social skills curriculum for justice-involved youth designed to increase employment and reduce recidivism. We are in the final stages of our IES-funded project and need to test how user friendly our training platform is.